JEFFERSON DAVIS FEDERAL OFFICER SHOT AT BENTONVILLE. The Little Roy. True Dissecret of the 24th

The announcement of the appointment of Mr. Broadwell on Con. Price's stuff reminds us of the abouting of a Pederal officer in Bentanville, Major Broadwill, was at Bentonville, on his way from the lead misses in Missouri, in which he had ome interest. The Federals, then in Benton other property and subjected him to various in dignilies. Some days after this, when the main saw a Federal officer, one of those who had robbed him, riding through the street. He haited him, and a fightenmost, in which Himadwell shot the officer with a pistol, at a distance of thirty or orty yards. He then took the herse and equip page of the Federal and rode off. The citizens of Bentunville dreading the vengeance of the Federals, fealishly and avered to hide the body of the dead man, which led to the statement is the St. Louis papers, that the officer had been assessinated in a prity. Upon the discovery of his death, the Federals, in revenge, set fire to the

to The New Orleans Program dwells upon the sterling moral characteristics displayed by our men at Shibob, and remarks:

There is one notable feature of this admirable conduct of our men which has come to our knowledge through the medium of private and authentic information. We have been told that among those of them who stood firmest, longhi bravest, and suffered most, were the most exemplary in personal private character. There is said to have been a most marked seriousness in the conduct and department of those young volunteers, on entiting the contest and throughout its continuance. We can madily conceive of this; for the cause in which they were engaged, and to which, with impulsive ander, they had levoted themselves was one of high principle. The party on board the Anderson.
